

TEEN ISSUES RESEARCH PROJECT

The Perks of Being a Wallflower

01

POWERPOINT

Create a visually appealing presentation that you will share with the class.

02

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Cite your sources on a properly formatted Annotated Bibliography.

03

SURVEY

Conduct a brief survey related to your topic and analyze the results.

04

PRESENTATION

Put together the multiple aspects of your project and present your findings to the class.

POWERPOINT

Create a presentation on PowerPoint, Google Slides, or Prezi. Limit the majority of your slides to 20 words or less. Incorporate a variety of visuals including charts, infographics, and images. Include the following:

Show statistically that this is an issue among teens; try to find national, state, and local statistics.

Data and analysis from your own survey (outlined below).

What are negative side effects directly related to this issue?

What warning signs can students/parents/teachers look for?

What do the experts say you should do to help someone you know with this issue?

What do the experts say you should do to get help if you yourself have this issue?

BIBLIOGRAPHY

List all of the resources you used to get your information on a separate document.

You will need a minimum of 6 resources from the internet

Include a brief description of what information each site contains.

Make sure you format the document correctly.

SURVEY

On Survey Monkey or Google Forms create a three question survey dealing with the teen problem that you are researching.

Give the survey to a sampling of at least 15 students.

Compile the results of your survey questions.

Incorporate two graphs into your presentation.

Include your analysis of the results in the presentation.

PRESENTATION

Before giving your presentation, provide your audience with the following information:

Why you choose the topic. (Be sure to give a reason more than the simple “I think it is a problem” or “I had to pick something.”)

Three things everyone needs to know about this issue.

Where someone can go if they have any additional questions or want more information about this issue.
